Spend more time on high-level concepts, less time on nitty gritty like Excel and SQL. Remember, these students are going to be managers and leaders - they will most likely delegate that type of work to others. If not, then they should take a class that specifically focuses on training for that software. So stay focused on IT's role within business and the enterprise, and what managers need to know. You did this for the most part. Overall, instruction was good and relevant. Thanks.

I really enjoyed this class and learned a lot! I appreciate that Prof. Garrett choose reading material was not only very educational but also very interesting and relevant in the working world. The articles discussed real business issues and topics instead of stale text book topics. This class also made me more interested in the IT in my workplace - I've attended an internal tech class to learn more about IT at work as a result, something that I would not have made the time for prior to this class.

The instructor also displays a high level of commitment in ensuring that the students understand the course, as well the practical applications.

Appreciate professor's enthusiasm with the course matter and knowledge! He was very motivating and understanding with everything!

The workload was heavy, but was a great learning experience considering my lack of knowledge. One negative was that the instructor would sometimes go fast. I really enjoyed the class either way.
